

Intermittent Catheters Research

The MultiCath program of research is funded by the UK National Institute for Health Research and is investigating the safety and user acceptability of a 'mixed package' of intermittent catheters i.e. single and multiple use catheters.

The Chief Investigator is Professor Mandy Fader from the University of Southampton. Part of the research program includes understanding current global practice and availability of intermittent catheters (IC). We have therefore designed a survey which will hopefully capture this information. If you have knowledge of, or currently teach IC we would very much appreciate it if you would take a few minutes to complete our survey by clicking on the link below.
