

Start	End	Topic	Speakers
08:00	08:20	Introduction: Ethical concepts surrounding women's sexuality	Yahir Santiago-Lastra
08:20	08:25	Discussion	Yahir Santiago-Lastra Maria Uloko Amir Lastra De Leon Unwanaobong Nseyo
08:25	08:45	The History of Women's Sexual Health - The Myths of Unwell Women	Unwanaobong Nseyo
08:45	08:50	Discussion	Yahir Santiago-Lastra Maria Uloko Amir Lastra De Leon Unwanaobong Nseyo
08:50	09:10	What to consider about women's sexual health when treating pelvic floor disorders	Yahir Santiago-Lastra
09:10	09:20	Discussion	Yahir Santiago-Lastra Maria Uloko Amir Lastra De Leon Unwanaobong Nseyo
09:20	09:50	Break	None
09:50	10:10	The intersection of the law and the ethics of women's sexual health	Amir Lastra De Leon
10:10	10:15	Discussion	Yahir Santiago-Lastra Maria Uloko Amir Lastra De Leon Unwanaobong Nseyo
10:15	10:35	The comprehensive sexual function evaluation and how to implement it in your practice	Maria Uloko
10:35	10:40	Discussion	Yahir Santiago-Lastra Maria Uloko Amir Lastra De Leon Unwanaobong Nseyo
10:40	11:00	Case Presentations	Yahir Santiago-Lastra Maria Uloko Amir Lastra De Leon Unwanaobong Nseyo

Aims of Workshop

The goal of the course from the ICS Ethics Committee is to provide pelvic floor specialists with comprehensive knowledge needed to recognize:

1. The history of women's sexual rights, our evolving perceptions of women's bodies, and the historical background that has stunted scientific progress in women's sexual health
2. The ethical dilemmas at play in our patient encounters and within the framework of healthcare that women have to navigate to seek treatment for sexual or pelvic floor concerns
3. The anatomical and hormonal ramifications that must be understood by all providers
4. How we provide comprehensive sexual health guidance to women in an ethical and compassionate way that considers the historical contexts and the need for advocacy

Educational Objectives

The participants will engage and interact with the course faculty through:

1. Guided didactic sessions with ample audience survey response questions and live feeds
2. Case-based scenarios that will require audience input
3. A "mock trial" in which a staged deposition is heard regarding an ethical issue relating to women, their sexuality, and pelvic floor health.

The outline of this workshop is intended to denote for the course participants how care for women's health, their sexuality, and their pelvic floor expand beyond the patient encounter and into the domains of history, the healthcare system at large, our societal constraints, our justice systems and bioethics in general

This comprehensive knowledge will be incredibly applicable to the course participants as it will provide great "take aways" and talking points all within a highly interactive framework that will make the course fun and incredibly thought-provoking!

The goal of the course:

1. The history of women's sexual rights, our evolving perceptions of women's bodies, and the historical background
2. The ethical dilemmas at play in our patient encounters and within the framework of healthcare that women have to navigate to seek care for sexual or pelvic floor concerns
3. the anatomical and hormonal ramifications that need to be understood by all providers treating the pelvic floor
4. the path forward – how we provide comprehensive sexual health guidance to women in an ethical and compassionate way that considers the historical contexts

Learning Objectives

identify common ethical themes relevant to the evaluation of sexual and pelvic floor health in womenA.

Target Audience

Urology, Urogynaecology and Female & Functional Urology, Bowel Dysfunction, Conservative Management

Advanced/Basic

Basic

Suggested Learning before Workshop Attendance

Ethical Issues in Women's Healthcare: Practice and Policy

Edited by: Lori d'Agincourt-Canning and Carolyn Ells